At the French settlers, all of whom have known her from shildhood: Her name-her real name-is Guadalive Payel (or Payelle), and she was born in Portland, a suburb or part of Louisville, Ky. Her father came to this city when she was very young and kept a grocery and liquor store near where the old South market stood, on Main street, between Union and Gayoso streets. After some years be moved his business out to Fort Pickering, where he died. Her mother subsequently married a man named Vio-ges (or Vosges), and shortly after died. During the war, in 1863, Guadalive left the city and went to Vicksburg, where she only remained a short time, however. After the surrender she married a Yankee offi-cer named Day, with whom she lived awhile, and by whom she had a child-alittle girl, who is now living with ber sister on Beale street. Major Day died some two or three years ago, and she re-turned 'to this city (they having gone away shortly after marriage), since which time we prefer not to recount her mode of life. Suffice to say that it has been a loose one, and most scandalous stories are told of her-some of which, for the honor of the sex, we prefer not to be lieve—such, for instance, as the allegation brought against her by the man whom she killed. These stories will no doubt all be brought out on the day of the ex amination, and parties will be implicated in the killing that at present are completely unknown. We will keep our readers posted to every phase of this remarksble and terrible homleide. CURIOUS COUNCIDENCE. We have heard since writing the above the following coincidence, related to us by a prominent officer of police. Two ago, the very night on which Mr

Gos Banks was shot, his mother accident-ally took an overdose of morphine and died. At the time of the death her sen Ephraim (a brother of the deceased), was ff on a fishing excursion, and a daughter absent in the country. Both were absent in the same manner and at the same place when Gus Banks met his death day before yesterday. If this be true, it is cer-tainly a most remarkable and curious combination of circumstances.

We are indebted to Walker Wood, Req who arrived from Somerville yesterday, for the particulars of one of the most cold-blooded and horrible affairs that we have lessly shot down on Wednesday by the woman "Myra Day." Notification of death was immediately served on 'Squire Hall, and at nine o'clock he held notive was reverge. SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Street Rallroad Company.

A very serious and painful accident happened yesterday morning, at about half past nine o'clock, on the Main street railroad, between Jefferson and Adams railroad, between Jenerson and Adams streets, to Dr. James Carson, an aged and well known physician from Smithland, Ky., who had both bones of his right leg broken while getting out of a car. We give the following statement of the affair, give the following statement of the affair, as made to us by Dr. Snyder, of our city. who is a life-long friend of Dr. Carson.

The latter had but recently arrived in the city, en route for home, from a protracted tour in Louisiana. Yesterday morning he got on a street car (No. 2, driven try one Redmond) somewhere on lower Main street, and on arriving at Jefferson street pulled the bell to stop. The driver, who was conversing with a passenger, paid no attention to the signal, and he repeated it. Still the driver paid no attention, and the Doctor seeing himself being carried far beyond his point of destination, with no chance of meking the driver stop the car, assayed to get out while it was in motion. The animals having their own way, through some four or five miles from Somerville, killed a man (whose name it is thought beet not to mention), as it was proven on trial, in self-defense. He was arrested, examined and discharged, as entirely instifiable; but a relative of the man who was killed made a vow to revenge him, and a few months ago was heard to swear that "neither Harrison Baily nor Ben, Chambers (a witness who testified very strongly in his favor), should live to see the 30th of June."

On Saturday last, Mr. Baily visited Somerville to transact nome business, and to n returning home in the evening, saw lying in the road, just before reaching his place, a package neatly done up in white paper. He diamounted, picked it up, and on unrolling it, discovered it to be a small porter bottle full or nearly full of liquer—looking, to use his own words, "as if two or three drinks had been taken out of it."

On picking is up he noticed that it was siligntly imbedded in the loose earth of the road, as if it had fallen some distance, and as he knew that his neighbor, Mr. McFadden, had been in town, and had started out just ahead of him, he concluded arrangements made for instituting a suit out at the mosth, and as a consequence, against the City Railroad Company for heavy damages, which, under the circumstances as detailed, he will, no doubt, recover. We hope that Colonel Alexander will make an example of this driver, if the case is as represented to us, which we cannot doubt, from the high nature of our
